“ Today marks one month since I last saw you. The thing I remember most about your appearance that day is how pretty your hair looked. You sure would have loved it. You were always so concerned about your hair. You wouldn't leave the house if your hair didn't look good. I remember being a little girl riding in the car with you and it could be one hundred degrees outside but you wouldn't put the windows down because the wind would blow your hair out of place. I remember I would complain about the car being so hot and I couldn't wait until we reached our destination so that I could get out of that heat but now I would give anything to have just one more of those scorching rides with my granny Dot. I miss you so much. Not a single day passes that I don't think of you. I'm not even sure if an hour passes that you don't cross my mind. I always made sure that I told you I loved you each and every time we spoke and for that I am thankful. I know that you loved me more than anything in this world and I can only hope that you knew that you meant exactly that much to me, the world. Although I can no longer see you, I know that you are still with me. I will always keep you in that special place in my heart, right where you have always been. I love you, my granny Dot.
