“ I was a year younger than Greg, he was always nice to me in school, always included me in stuff. Gonna miss him even though I haven't seen him in years. Still got good memories. RIP Greg

“ Greg was the best childhood friend you could ask for and he would not hesitate to help anyone if asked. We certainly shared plenty of good times, repeatedly proving that brainpower is inversely proportional to the teenage boy head count (or as my father would observe "there is not half a brain between you two, what were y'all thinking?!").

We learned lots of valuable lessons in those formative years, lessons such as you probably shouldn't drink beer found in a dirt-road ditch on a summer day. Skunky Country Club Malt Liquor can stain your taste buds for decades.

Another lesson was about going frog gigging in a boat. We really enjoyed frog gigging, not that we got a lot of frogs, but sounds of nature and cold refreshments were memorable. The lesson was: only one at a time when you have to go to the bathroom. Who knew two people standing up in a boat at the same time can turn it over, even in one foot of water?! The third member of our frog gigging team was not amused.

One final lesson from our youth: when you spend the night at Greg's, try to avoid sleeping downwind from him. Greg was the gassiest redhead I've ever met.

It is sad that we may grow apart with age, but the love of a "brother by choice" never leaves you. I hope you, and all yours, find peace and comfort. We'll all see you soon, and until then, my brother, "frog gig nekkid" as much as you want!!

With thoughts of you always,

Eric

“ Greg was one of the funniest, kindest people I have ever known. I have never forgotten his kindness to me when I was new at Pulaski Junior High. How could anyone not love Greg? I am so sad for Lynette, the children, Brenda and Terry and his mother, my friend Bennita. This sweet man, who no matter how many times I have seen him over the years as an adult, will always be in my mind's eye, that joking, cute little redhead in 7th grade who welcomed the new girl.

“ He was an incredible man, I am honored to have called him a friend. He had such a kind heart and his family was his treasure. I don't ever bake a cookie without smiling at him always asking "what aisle in Wal Mart do you buy those on?" His presence will be missed in so many lives. RIP our friend. Lynnette our hearts, prayers and love are with you all.
