“ We didn't start out off on the right foot, But through the years I've know you, we became best friends. You finally came to terms once you realized that i knew what i was talking about and was able to prove it in my actions. I'll see you again brother, if i have to drop from heaven and walk through Hell, I'll find you, but our next visit especially in the first 24 hours won't be pleasant for you. You knew what I went through in June and I made it throught it! Losing a child is the hardest thing one (i) can ever endure. I told you let me know what I could do and what you needed me to do, that I was here for you anytime, any place, and anywhere.

“ Jason, I don't think you knew how much impact you made on us all. Us younger people, you led, you trusted (but verified 😊) everything we did. Never once would you let us slack. You gave the best motivational talks. You TRULY cared for us. Always checked in making sure we were ok. Dealt beautifully with our petty arguments with each other at work. Held us to the highest standards in every little thing we did. You showed and practiced profound integrity. You treated us all equally and knew our potential before we did. I will carry on your 'mindset' forever and hope to one day pass it on to the next generation. You deserved SO much better than what you were dealt. We all know that. You are loved and the world will never be the same without you in it. But you have a team, separate or not, we will still be your team and we all understand and will carry on the way you would expect us to. Rest easy ❤️
