“ Not exactly a memory but a statement. Your death has me thinking and reflecting. We have been family members for a very long time but were never around each other very much. We certainly never shared a conversation that I remember, besides Hello and how are you? (pretty much). What I realize is how much alike we are/were. Hearts of gold but stayed to ourselves for the most part. We are somewhat introverts who love our people and we are/were not the best and at making conversation with anyone but our people. And that's ok - those that know us - love us. No one could ever say we are trying to impress anyone but we are/were just us. I am sorry that I just realized how much alike we were because that relationship should have been nurtured better by both of us. It is never because we dislike someone - our social skills are slightly lacking but the love in our hearts is not lacking at all. I love you Ronald See you in eternity and we won't be lacking anything there. Rest in peace sweet brother
