“ Last summer, I made a surprise visit to my sister’s house. My sister told me Zoë hadn’t felt very well the past few days. I suggested some fresh air and maybe a visit to this flower farm that was near their house. I thought it would be a fun thing to do with Layla and Zoe. I asked Zoe if she felt like going, and she said “Yea!”. I remember she changed out of her lounge clothes into this beautiful pink sun dress so fast, it felt like seconds. I laughed because I can’t recall a teenage girl getting dressed and put together that quick, ever. I said something like you must really want to go and we all laughed. We went to the farm and bought almost everything they sold in their little gift shop for the girls. We picked flowers and filled their vases with the flowers that they wanted. That day felt magical. I took these photos of her, as she wasn’t a big fan of her picture being taken. I love you Zoë.
